PAUL FENAROLI APPOINTED CHAIRMAN OF THE BOARD AT EXAMINETICS

Chief Executive Officer takes on Chairman role

OVERLAND PARK, KS, March 9, 2021 - Examinetics, the nation's leading provider of onsite occupational health services, announced today that Paul Fenaroli, President and Chief Executive Officer, has been appointed as Chairman of the Board of Directors. Fenaroli succeeds UK-based Simon Barker, who has occupied this position since the inception of Examinetics in 2004.

Fenaroli's leadership in the past year was instrumental in increasing Examinetics revenue and profitability in a time of uncertainty, by challenging the status quo and empowering a culture change towards resourcefulness and nimbleness. This influential pivot led to a record-breaking year for Examinetics, while improving positioning as the authority in providing onsite medical screening and surveillance services in the U.S.

In his role as Chairman, Fenaroli will continue to drive Examinetics growth with the company mission and core values at the center of the strategy. Previous to his role at Examinetics, Fenaroli had most recently been a consultant to financial sponsors, boards and CEOs of publicly and privately held companies in a variety of industries throughout the U.S. He previously served as Chief Strategy Officer at Collective Brands, Inc. and as a Vice President and Partner at The Boston Consulting Group, after starting his career as a CPA with Ernst & Young.

Simon Barker, previous Chairman of the Board of Directors, said of the transition, "The successful performance of Examinetics last year is due to the commitment, understanding and willingness to adapt, as a company. With Paul Fenaroli as the Chairman of the Board, and CEO, I trust he will guide the business onwards and upwards for years to come."
